MAKE OUT SCHEDULE OF BASEBALL GAMES

Each Playground Team Will Meet the Other Three Teams Twice to Decide Championship.

A schedule of games for the indoor baseball league of the playgrounds was drafted at the meeting of the directors held Wednesday afternoon. Each team will play the other three teams twice. The schedule will contain the same number of games as did the schedule last year in order that all schools will have a clear chance of winning the championship. Because of the size of the diamond at the Adams school it was decided to hold all their games on neutral territory, four games being played at the Jefferson, one at the Washington, and one at the Webster.

Great interest is being taken in the starting of the league because the teams are so evenly matched. Last year the Webster and Adams schools were superior to the remaining two, with the result that the games were uninteresting. This year, however, many of the stars of the two leaders have passed the age limit of sixteen years, thus making it necessary to put in younger players. The schedule follows:

July 12—Jefferson vs. Washington, at Jefferson.
July 14—Webster vs. Adams, at Jefferson.
July 16—Washington vs. Adams, at Washington.
July 19—Jefferson vs. Webster, at Webster.
July 21—Washington vs. Webster, at Washington.
July 23—Jefferson vs. Adams, at Jefferson.
July 25—Washington vs. Adams, at Jefferson.
July 28—Jefferson vs. Webster, at Jefferson.
July 30—Washington vs. Webster, at Webster.
August 2—Washington vs. Jefferson, at Washington.
August 4—Jefferson vs. Adams, at Jefferson.
August 6—Webster vs. Adams, at Washington.

Beginning next week a series of tests of ability will be held at the various grounds to discover what the boys and girls of the city of various ages can do in an athletic way. A standard will be set in the various events and all those who can equal or better the limit will be given a badge for their work. A boy or girl to receive a badge must be able to pass the test in all the events or he will not receive the badge. The events to be practiced on during the remainder of the week are board jump, 100-yard dash, chinning, basketball free throw in addition to the hop, step and jump event.

Inclement weather still keeps the directors from starting the swimming classes. Besides being cold the water is filled with small particles of water which up to the present time have shown no indication of being carried away. The directors, however, hope that the water will soon clear, as many are waiting for the opening. This year there seems to be a lack of interest in the other people attending the grounds to the city of the tennis courts. With the grounds being open in the evening, this lack of interest is expected to be remedied.

The increasing world interest in sports and outing games has been helpful in extending the foreign markets for American athletic goods. Exports of which from 1912 to 1914 were $2,397,132. In 1915, shipments to the Philippines almost doubled—$4,878,192 and $81,404 in 1914. To Japan the United States sold only $44 of athletic goods in 1914, and to China $2,788, the last item comparing with $812 in 1912. This entire far eastern trade was stimulated by the Stockholm 1912 Olympic games and also the recent far eastern Olympic festival.

HITS BY ZIMMERMAN WIN

GAME WITH PITTSBURGH, 74

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Pittsburgh, July 8.—Allowing eleven hits, Bridgeport Jim Lavender mastered the Pittsburgh Pirates yesterday, the Cubs winning by the score of 7 to 4.

In the first inning the Cubs made a rampant rally and gave Lavender a three run lead to work on when the Great "Zim" tripled, scoring two.

Zimmerman scored on a single by Good, the "batter." Again in the third Zimmerman poked out a three base drive that scored Schulte, and was sacrificed home by Saier. In the eighth and ninth the Cubs made it sure by scoring one run in each inning, one of which was produced by a double steal. Three pitchers attempted to stop the Bruins, Babe Adams starting, and after the first inning mauling gave way to Cooper, southpaw, who lasted until the seventh when Conzelmann finished.

John "Red" Murray, the outfielder who was released by the New York Giants, will appear in the Cub uniform today, having accepted terms offered by Manager Bresnahan.

Sox idle Wednesday.
St. Louis, July 8.—Rain stopped the final game between the Sox and the St. Louis Browns yesterday in the third inning when the count stood 0 to 0. The Sox met Muscatine in an exhibition game today.

Boston's climbing Red Sox threaten to take the lead from the Sox today, being only two points behind the Chicago club as the result of winning six victories in three days over the Washington club. During that time the Sox suffered a slump which cut down their average and the Boston team moved into second place.

Minors "Blow Up."
Freeport, Ill.—The refusal of the Racine club to stay in a four club circuit of the Interstate league resulted in the dissolution of the league at a meeting of the directors here last night. Freeport has been offered the franchise of the Dubuque club, who have dropped out of the Three-I circuit.

The Southern Michigan Baseball league has passed out of existence, the clubs having grounded on the financial rocks. Six clubs were represented.

A special meeting of the directors of the Three-I league will be held at Bloomington tonight by club owners and it is believed two clubs besides Dubuque will surrender their franchises.

METROPOLITAN OPEN GOLF TOURNAMENT AT FOX HILLS.

"DOPE IT" BELOIT WILL BEAT CARDS IN COMBAT SUNDAY

Fairies of Beloit and Janesville Cardinals to Clash For District Title Here the Coming Sunday.

There will be a declaration of hostilities the coming Sunday and already the forces have begun to mobilize for the strife, for the combat to come is bound to be a spirited one, filled with bloodless tactics. The reason is that Janesville and Beloit are going to mix on the diamond for the title of Southern Wisconsin Cardinals. meet the Fairbanks-Morse nine on Sunday next here and as a consequence, the game of games should result, for the Cardinals are anxious to set the cheery "Fairies" down a notch.

The dope has it that the Cardinals will be easy victims for the Fairies, but it is a safe bet that the Line City bunch of leaguers for the combat will have to wage a bitter fight to shove the Cardinals from a victory. The Fairies have a commendable aggression of experience, the strongest of that Beloit has ever represented by. For the hurling department, they have our old friend, Nate Tilley, who Reddy Enright, former Cardinal manager, dug-up from the sanatorium of Albany and exposed his stellar pitching ability. Tilley left the Belvidere Nationals to go to Beloit under a good salary inducement.

Jack Wootton, old North End pitcher, whom the Cardinals have hung over in several games, and who in turn humbled the Cards in the final series last year, is also on the Fairies' slugging corps. A heavy named Miller is also doing some fancy twirling down at Beloit and anyone of these three may draw the job against the Cardinals and could give the Janesville swansmen a tough argument.

There has been a constant flow of college and semipro boys through Shibe park this season. No school has been barred from sending its players to Mr. Mack's institution of learning. Return tickets are always supplied, and most of them used. Come always gives them a fair show.

A good example of this was seen a few days ago when the Yanks were playing the Mackmen, a double header. Mack started a young collegian named Haas on the mound. The Yanks drew fifteen hits and sixteen runs on balls off the youngsters and walloped the Philadelphia 16 to 7.

Yet Mack didn't take the kid out—he let him stick and take his medicine. The kid, though, used his reputation ticket to Worcester Academy that night.

The same day, however, Mack drew what looks to be a diamond in the rough. He is a young Collegian named Crowell from Brown. Pitching his first professional game, he let the Yanks down with three hits, but lost by the tough luck score of 3-2 when his mates kicked the game away.

There is probably another reason why Mack is laboring so diligently to build up a new machine—he wants to give some of his knockers in the big guffaw—those who knocked him for losing the series with the Braves. The roar of the multitude still is sweet to the tall leader, too, and it doesn't seem right to him that he should be completely out in the cold as far as praise is concerned.

Star baseball players differ when it comes to being ambitious for their sons. Christy Mathewson evidently wants his Christy, Jr., to follow in his footsteps. The elder Christy takes straight to the Chicago Gunthers. Monroe took one wallop at them and this fact tends to make one believe they are not unbeatable. Knowing the rivalry between the two teams, both managers are stringing every effort to bolster up weak points to insure a victory. With the Cardinals playing in good form, the Fairies should have a "nice" enthusiastic and spirited game in upholding their reputation. No one has been picked to do the pitching for the Cardinals as yet. Manager Caldwell holding off the announcement until Friday or Saturday. Whoever he is, the Janesville fans hope that he displays "stuff" that will baffle the Fairies. A record breaking crowd is expected, for the Beloit team has the following of over 2,400 people at their Sunday and Saturday games and a number of the locals will accompany the team here, in hopes of seeing Janesville crushed.

CONNIE MACK BUILDS NEW TEAM FOR PHILA.

Athletic Manager Slowly But Surely Building Up a New Machine to Replace Old Championship Infield.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

New York, July 8.—Slowly and laboriously, but withal cheaply, Connie Mack is building a chassis for a new machine. His material is costing him nothing, and all the elongated leader is out in the time he puts in training it in the way it should shoot.

By this same simple method, Mack built up the most famous machine in two decades—the late lamented Athletics—only to see it cough, splutter and finally go headlong into the ditch October, 1914. Mack, it will be remembered, paid practically nothing for Collins, McNamara, Barry and Baker, the four members of the famous "100,000 infield." One cog netted him $50,000 which was practically so much clear profit, and but for the defalcation of J. Franklin Baker, the four members of the famous "100,000 infield" would have stuck another $50,000 in their pockets.

So these hot July days find the famous leader in exactly the same position he was in the July days of 1908 and 1909, when the Tigers were on the topmost pinnacle of fame—laboriously building and planning for the future.

There has been a constant flow of college and semipro boys through Shibe park this season. No school has been barred from sending its players to Mr. Mack's institution of learning. Return tickets are always supplied, and most of them used. Come always gives them a fair show.

THE GOOD JUDD OFFERS TO HELP

JUDGE, I TOOK IT AND HE SNATCHED IT BACK. I WAS JUST GOING TO TELL HIM ABOUT THE REAL TOBACCO CHEW.

SOME folks have tried so many kinds that they can hardly believe that there is a Real Tobacco Chew.

A user of ordinary tobacco needs to get the taste and comfort of the Real Tobacco Chew. Then he knows for sure that he has found the tobacco he's hunted for half his life.

A little chew of pure, rich, mellow tobacco—seasoned and sweetened just enough—cuts out so much of the grinding and spitting.

THE REAL TOBACCO CHEW IS NOW CUT TWO WAYS!! W-B CUT IS LONG SWEET. RIGHT CUT IS SHORT SWEET!!

Take less than one-quarter the old size chew. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just take a nibble of it until you find the strength chew that suits you, then see how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is The Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end.

The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered up. An excess of licorice and sweetening makes you spit too much.

One small chew takes the place of two big chews of the old kind.

(Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste.)

TIME FOR SHOWDOWN.

This is the caption the Madison Democrat places over its editorial in which it takes the legislature to task for failure to recognize the wishes of the people as regards retrenchment and reducing expenses of the state. The editorial itself follows:

"The legislature of Wisconsin is at the parting of the ways. The session can not last much longer. Legislative action must be taken very soon on important measures. The decision must be reached on the question whether the will of the people shall be heeded or disregarded. The people want a change in educational control and management. They want to build up and strengthen the common schools, and that, without injuring in any way, or impairing the efficiency of, our higher educational institutions. They want a central board of education, as a unifying agency that will deal justly with all educational matters, the highest to the lowest. This is not a new idea. It is not an untried plan. Its opponents are trying to confuse and mislead the people by misrepresentation and by raising false issues. Reports are being industriously circulated throughout the state that academic freedom is in danger, that the alumni, generally, oppose a central board, that mere politicians will be placed on the board that will have no protection, etc., etc. Of course sensible, candid, thoughtful men know there is not a word of truth in such statements. They are published simply to confuse the issues, to block progress, to prevent the administration from carrying out the program mapped out by the people. This matter was thoroughly discussed during the campaign, and it was admitted that, although Wisconsin has made progress along educational lines, there are in our present system, serious defects that need to be remedied. Strange that some short-sighted people should attribute what progress we have made to these defects. As well say that because a strong, vigorous man is troubled with corns on his feet, the corns are the source of his strength, are his only health preservative.

"Under the central board plan only men of high character, broad views and large experience will be selected for this important work. No executive would dare to appoint any others. The best, most impartial and most conservative thought of the state favors the change. Only in this way will the common schools get the support and supervision needed for the benefit of the hundreds of thousands of children who never have the opportunity of attending either a normal school or college. The central board will abolish the vicious practice now prevailing of everyone for himself. Our educational system will be a unit having but one purpose—the good of all. There will be an end to unseemly grabbing for funds and discreditable jockeying for appropriations on the part of those interested in any one particular institution. There will be such a correlation of forces as will make for the good of all. Witness what has been done in Iowa, Kansas and other states. The results accomplished there show, if any more evidence were needed than we now have, that the present system is cumbersome, wasteful and unsuited to our needs.

"Build up and improve the common schools and the success of the university is assured; but spend millions on the latter while neglecting the former and we have a system that is top-heavy with waste and unnecessary expansion above, and neglect, incompetence and very limited opportunities below. This is not fair to the children of the state, to those who must always constitute the great democracy which must ever and always be the real support of civil liberty."

THE PEACE CONFERENCE.

Miss Jane Addams of Hull House fame received an ovation in New York, the other day, on her return from the women's peace conference, recently held at The Hague and largely attended by suffragettes.

Just what was accomplished, is not very clear to the public mind, as the reports sent out have been more or less biased, but one thing is certain, namely, that the women of Belgium and England are united in demanding justice first as will be seen by the following statement from the "Remonstrance."

"The business session of the third day of the International Congress of Women came to a dramatic climax when Mrs. Rosika Schwimmer of Hungary, after having requested the audience to rise for a silent tribute to the dead on the battlefields, urged the nations of the world to make an end to the war, to begin peace negotiations, and to effect a settlement based upon justice. Unanimously the delegates endorsed her fervid plea."

But, between Mrs. Schwimmer's speech and the action of the delegates, something happened, which seems to have been blue-penciled from the Journal's report. This is what it was, according to the Associated Press report:

"Mlle. Hammer, of the Belgian delegation, thereupon asked permission to utter a few words. When this was granted, she astounded her audience with the dramatic exclamation: 'I am a Belgian, and I cannot think as you do. There can be no peace without justice. The war must continue until the Belgians' wrongs have been righted. There must be no mediation except at the bar of justice.'"

"General sympathy for the suffering of the Belgians caused part of the audience to break into cheers."

In response to this pathetic appeal, on motion of Miss Holbrook of Chicago, the word "justice" was inserted in the resolution before it was put to vote.

Earlier in the same session, there was another incident, which is omitted from the Journal's report. Mrs. Amy Lillingston of London got the floor, and said:

"I was a suffragist and I remain a suffragist. I suffered in jail for it. I am just a plain English working woman, but I represent millions of women who favor the present just war as much as do the men. One hundred and eighty women are said to be waiting at Tilbury to come to this congress to talk peace. For every one of those, a thousand English women are willing to accompany their sons and husbands to fight. We are tired of the century-old platitudes such as are uttered here."

At this point, Mrs. Lillingston was ruled out of order. But she had said enough, in connection with Mlle. Hammer's protest, to make it clear that there is not the radical difference between women and men which the suffragists insist upon, when issues of right and justice and patriotism and sacrifice, for home and country are involved.

That the man Holl, who destroyed his own life after attempting the life of J. Pierpont Morgan, was a fanatic as well as an anarchist, is not a question of doubt. One of the most startling things about the tragedy is that such a man should be employed as an instructor in an American college. There are too many Holls enrolled to-day as teachers in our higher institutions of learning, and while they might hesitate to enter the ranks of assassins, they are free to sow the seeds of socialism and discontent. Governor Philipp was right when he said that he wanted his boy and girl to know what socialism is, but he objected to their being taught the doctrine.

In face of the demand for guns from across the water there appears to be enough left for the cranks that remain at large in this country.

According to latest reports nothing of any consequence was blown up at the Fourth celebration but a few hyphens that are not even missed.

Huerta might be happier back in Wall street or on his summer home on Long Island where he could lose nothing but his money.

It is a pretty poor branch organization that can not arrange for a national convention to be held in San Francisco this summer.

One effect of the European war has been to make over the modern suffragette into the old-fashioned woman.

Bad Teeth Make Bad Boys

The president of the New York juvenile association asserts that 91 per cent of the delinquent boys that come to the association to be looked after have bad teeth from which they suffer and that instead of worrying only about their morals the association worries about their teeth with the result that after two years of competent dentistry and daily use of the tooth brush 90 per cent of the boys are turned out as reformed.

COFFIN HARDWARE BOOSTED BY WAR; FUNERALS HIGHER

Metal Decorations and Handles Boosted in Price Because of Scarcity of Antimony.

The world war, ascribed as the reason for an increase in the price of many commodities, now threatens the funeral people and others, with higher funeral expenses.
It is not that the funeral director or his cohorts are exacting more for their services, hacks or automobiles, or that the funeral has seen fit to charge more for his blossoms, but there is a boom in antimony ores. Wisconsin manufacturers of coffins assert the cost of this ore has been increased about 25 per cent.

The demand in this country for antimony to be used in metals as a foundation for silver plate coffin trimmings is large and persistent and is not satisfied by the Chinese output, although that has been greatly increased. Before the outbreak of the European war, the leading brand of antimony, Cookson's, was quoted in New York at about 7 cents a pound, with other brands ranging from 5.5 cents upwards.

The outbreak of hostilities was followed by a rise in prices and quotations for Cookson's soon rose above 20 cents, and after some fluctuation the year closed with the quotation at 15 to 15.5 cents a pound, and other brands from 13 to 14 cents a pound.
The British government placed an embargo on the shipment of antimony, and the price rose so that in May Cookson's was listed at 40 cents or more a pound but in a few days quotations ceased, for the stock in this country was sold.

Quotations on other European brands of antimony and Hungarian, ceased a little later, leaving the market to Chinese and Japanese metals made from Chinese ore, which were quoted during the last part of June at 37 to 37.5 cents a pound.

These conditions have caused the American users to hunt the country over for antimony ores free from arsenic, lead, zinc and copper. Respectable have begun to work deposits which have heretofore been unprofitable.

It seems safe to predict that soon after the close of the war the price of antimony will again drop to near its ante-bellum level. Most buyers of ores seem to be discounting heavily against this contingency, and many owners refuse to sell at the prices offered, which seem to range from 50 cents a unit for green ore running 35 to 50 per cent antimony to $1 and $1.50 a unit for ore running about 50 per cent at the railroad station near the mine.

The permanent good which may be hoped for from the present abnormal situation is said to be the consequent exploitation may develop some mine with ore that is large enough to be worked at a profit even at the normal low prices.

JOHN CLARK FOUND GUILTY OF SPEEDING

Jury of Five Renders Verdict After Short Trial—Stay of Execution Granted for Appeal.

A verdict of guilty was rendered by the first jury in the case of the city vs. John Clark this afternoon after a short deliberation of the evidence presented in the case. Clark was charged with violating the city ordinance regulating the speed of automobiles, and during the trial contradictory evidence was introduced by the attorneys—E. G. McGowan for the defense and City Attorney W. H. Dougherty. When the verdict was received the court granted a ten day stay of execution and it was announced by Attorney McGowan that an appeal to the circuit court would be taken, on the ground that the larger part of the evidence presented was for the defense. The jury trying the case was as follows: George Welsh, George Keester, William Lawrence, Carl Heise and William Podelwell.

SENATE CONTINUES TO GET NEW IDEAS ON CENTRAL BOARD

Senator Bray Offers Substitute to Van Gordon Bill—Studenmayer Substitute Amended.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., July 8.—Idea regarding central board of education are becoming more complex as the session advances. When the Van Gordon bill was reached on the senate calendar last night, Senator Bray offered a substitute to create a state board of education of seven members, one appointed by the "regents of the common schools," one by the university regents, one by the normal school regents, one by the state board of industrial education, they to serve with the governor, secretary of state and state superintendent, as ex-officio. Under this substitute the board of regents and common schools is created, twelve to be appointed by congressional districts and one at large. Three members of this latter board have power to investigate common schools and make a report to the state board of education showing the amount spent in each school district, the value of property in the district, and such other data as the board may desire.

Under the bill, the state board of education is empowered to "co-operate with the management of all schools and institutions, to encourage each to do its work most efficiently and to unify, harmonize and correlate the work of the various educational institutions, to the end that all needless duplication and all extravagance may be avoided. The state board is directed to furnish complete information to the legislature regarding the amount of money necessary to carry on educational activities.

Senators Everett and Burke offered amendments to the Studenmayer substitute to the central board bill. The latter measure provides for a board of five which shall prepare a budget for the state, to be presented to the legislature. The Everett and Burke amendments give this board power to supervise the school buildings and districts, and to control the state lands.

Kill Corn Syrup Bill.
The corn syrup labeling bill, which makes its biennial appearance in the legislature, was killed last night by a vote of 12 to 15 the senate.

By a vote of 12 to 15 the senate refused to suspend the rules to receive from the assembly the Helm bill, recently non-concurred in, legalizing Sunday sports and amusements, for action on acting on a motion for reconsideration.

Senator Biecher offered a substitute to the Cunningham auto registration bill providing that all the license revenue from motor cars shall be returned to the county in which the car is registered to the towns pro rata to the number of cars registered from each, the money to be used for the repair of roads. The state is to retain only enough to pay for expenses of administration.

Senator Boshard offered another substitute to the jitney bill, 464, which would give the jitney operator and the electric railways. It requires jitney owners to take out a bond and to file a schedule with the railroad commission as to the number of cars registered from each, the money to be used for the repair of roads. The state is to retain only enough to pay for expenses of administration.

The Cretney bill to compel the university to receive without examination graduates of all four year high schools in the state, regardless of whether such schools are on the accredited list, was defeated by a vote of 15 to 12.

Senator Boshard pointed out that for two years the university has been enforcing such a regulation that no student who is not a graduate of a high school accredited by the university, is allowed to enter the university. He said that the university was mixing in politics. Senator Boshard replied that the president was merely offering information to ignore which would be "made" by the members of the legislature.

The judiciary committee reported for non-concurrence the assembly bill for tribunals of conciliation and arbitration, which would increase the pay of legislators from $500 to $1,000 per term, and indefinite postponement of the senate bill recompensing Dr. O. E. Eliason, state veterinarian, for his services in defending himself in a suit brought by his predecessor, A. H. Hartwig.

In expectation of a debate and vote on the central board bill, the senate galleries were filled with spectators.

LIQUOR QUESTION IS NATIONAL ONE SPEAKERS DECLARE

National "Dry" Advocates at Convention Show Reason Why Liquor Question Should Be Dealt With By Federal Government.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Atlantic City, N. J., July 8.—Former Governor Malcolm R. Paterson, of Tennessee, who was one of the speakers at today's session of the national Anti-Saloon League convention, urged that national prohibition was the proper way to deal with the liquor question.

"The case against the Liquor Traffic has been made out," he said. "The witnesses, who testify, conform to every legal requirement of credibility; they are intelligent, have a means of information and are willing to speak the truth. They are Science, Experience and Religion.

"Experience comes, and sets before our view an inkpot, sullen, moaning, struggling, unhappy procession of victims; so long that it would most reach across the continent; so sad that it would move a stone to pity. She shows the dry husks of hope, insanity and sudden death, disease, want, waste and bloody crime.

"Religion comes and delivers her testimony. She relates how hearts have been hardened to her eternal other fishes and is thoroughly despondent of justice and bloody smears, mercy feeling before aet, passion in flame, and love with a broken wing. There has been no false testimony delivered; there has been no exaggeration, no contradiction among these witnesses.

Mr. Patterson discussed state rights. The duty of government, he said, was to protect the citizen with good environment, to dig no pitfalls in his path; to make it easy as possible for the citizen to do right, as hard as possible to do wrong.

This is the highest attribute of sovereignty. The efforts of our government to suppress the lottery; to stamp out polygamy; to destroy human slavery; to prevent the disease of intemperance; to eradicate the diseases of cattle; to preserve the public health; to give the people pure food, were all in harmony with the purpose of the creation, and to maintain the liquor traffic is a prostitution of its power.

Before Congress Again.
Richmond Pearson Hobson, of Alabama, one of the authors of the Joint Resolution on national prohibition, urged a strong case for its passage and a close vote at the last session of Congress, proposed in an address before the national Anti-Saloon League convention today that the resolution be brought up again on December 21st, next, just a year, lacking one day, from the date of its previous consideration. The former Alabama congressman outlined in his address "The Grand Strategy of the Fight" and the anti-saloon forces should follow in the "Great Liquor War."

As part of an educational campaign, Mr. Hobson urged that the President Wilson "be formally requested to practice total abstinence, as an example and to banish all intoxicating liquors from the White House, and to establish temperance in the Civil Service like that practiced by railroads and other businesses."

That the scope of the war might be widened, he suggested a petition to Congress for a special appropriation for an international anti-alcohol conference as soon as peace in Europe was restored.

Among the numerous points he raised in questions of strategy, he urged the "enfranchisement of woman everywhere," incorporation of churches and other organizations into the anti-saloon campaign; a special effort to secure the full co-operation of the business world; and the incorporation of national associations for constitutional prohibition.

He suggested that the mentioned association should be specially authorized to issue a national prohibition war loan of $1,000,000, to be distributed by friends of temperance and to be guaranteed with provision for interest and sinking funds by the various churches.

Dan Morgan Smith, judge advocate of the state of Illinois, who addressed the national convention of the Anti-Saloon League today, summed up in epigrammatic form what he called "The Price of a Drink." He said:

"If the results of drinking were purely personal, then the complaint of the 'wet' that the anti-liquor forces are trying to interfere with the personal liberty of drinkers might carry with it some force, but drink is sold in the installment plan, and it is made when you get the drink, the others when the drink gets you!"

"The greater part of the payments are made by those who do not drink. The price of a drink runs from a dime to a dollar, and the drinker pays the dime and humanity pays the balance."

Enforcement of local or state prohibitions depends upon the inclination, energy and honesty of local authorities, but you can make prohibition prohibitory—any one of you—by a persistent prosecution of those who violate the law to prosecute the violators of the dry law.

"If a judge is too wet to do his duty, make it so hot for him he will dry out."

"It often does more good, in the enforcement of liquor laws, to kick one crooked chief of police out of the police station than to get many drunks into the police station."

Referring to employers who have taken a stand against the drinking employee, he said:

"There is room on the water wagon for the employer as well as for the employee."

DOG-FISH-CURIOUS FRESHWATER SHARK

Habits of Fish Prove That He is a Water Pirate Among Other Members of Finny Tribe.

There are dogfish, catfish, squirrelfish, angel-fish, and starfish, but these are not fish at all. Also there are dogfish and dogfish. On the ocean, a dogfish is a small shark. But in the Mississippi valley, on the Great Lakes and on the Atlantic coast rivers from Virginia to Texas, a dogfish is a remarkable creature of the fresh water, looking quite like other fish, but not nearly related to any other fish in this or any other region. He has a handsome looking coat of hard, shiny scales, which it takes an axe to penetrate. He is bullet headed, with a most formidable looking set of teeth. And he has a disgusting habit of snapping when taken from the water. He is a pirate, living on the usefulness of his food. As food he has no standing, cotton bating tastes better. His tenacity of life is marvelous. A specimen brought in in a moist sack was forgotten in a corner, and after a week was none the worse when found.

But the most remarkable thing about our dogfish is its breeding habits. They were first discovered and studied in Wisconsin waters by members of the former Milwaukee Lake Laboratory.

About the last of April the male fish seeks a sheltered bay or other shallow water, and clears a space two feet in diameter of weeds, silt and mud. Then he goes out, finds a female, or several, and induces them to lay their eggs in the nest so formed. This done, the females disappear, the male assuming sole charge. He remains closely over the nest to guard it from intruders, and to turn the eggs with his tail to keep the eggs clean from silt, and to provide them with a slow but steady flow of fresh water. And he dashes savagely at any larger fish that may approach the neighborhood.

After the young are hatched, he still stays with them. After a few days the little fellows, black as a he and half an inch long, can swim to the surface, and the old male begins to leave the nest. And now can be seen a most interesting sight, the old male, under his tail, 500 to 1500 in number, for all the world like young chicks running with the old hen. This continues for six weeks, the old male moping at this time slowly and with caution. Occasionally he shoots away some distance from the young, but they always succeed in finding him again. Finally when they have assumed the colors of their parents, the male leaves them and they must shift for themselves.

Foodstuffs and Their Worth.
Beetsteak and some vegetables are rich in iron. In meat the iron exists largely as hemoglobin, due to the blood contained in the muscular tissue. Iron in combination with protein matter is found in considerable quantity in grains. String beans, navy beans, lima beans, spinach especially, cabbage and dried peas are rich in iron. Among the fruits that have plenty of iron are dried prunes, apples and raisins.

BUYING CLOTHES ON SCHEDULE.
Do you buy your clothes on schedule?
That is, do you plan at the beginning of the season exactly what clothes you need and when and where to buy them at the best advantage? And, having made such a schedule, do you keep reasonably close to it, or do you let yourself be beguiled from it by any passing fancy?

"For two years I've wanted one of these sailor hats," a girl said to me the other day.

"Then why didn't you get one?" I asked. She is a girl who has a comfortable amount of money to spend on her clothes.

"Well, last year I had planned to buy one and I fell in love with a stunning leghorn and it cost so much that I had to make my year before last do for every day. And then this year I had the money laid aside to buy the sailor and what did I do but get a crush on a little lavender chip hat. It is a dear hat, but it wasn't at all thing I needed, or really wanted. I knew it before I got it home, but I bought it at a sale and I couldn't change it. I'm always doing things like that."

She sighed and I laughed. Not because I didn't sympathize with her, but because she described such a common experience.

The to spend on her wardrobe, a passion for some garment so expensive that you will have to curtail all the rest of your plans, is not a good cause.

First, Use Your Imagination.
In planning one's wardrobe for the summer I think one should first of all use imagination. Project yourself into your own life for the summer. Picture your daily occupation and imagine what kind of clothes you will need the most, and so her problem is one of selection and elimination.

Next, plan your color scheme. A friend of mine has decided that the two colors most becoming to her are dark blue and light blue, and lavender. Of course, this results in monotony, but on the other hand it insures her becoming clothes and is less expensive because, if your clothes all follow the same general color scheme they can be carried over from season to season more successfully.

Why Not Write It Down?
I suppose many women will laugh when I suggest that having made these plans, you put them on paper in a definite schedule, covering colors, style and price you can afford to pay. Perhaps such a business-like proceeding is funny, and then again perhaps it isn't.

And now, having made your schedule, be wise enough to depart from it when it is advantageous to do so and firm enough not to be beguiled away when it is not.

How shall you know? Well, my friends, that's part of your business as the manager of the family money. All responsible positions demand the ability to make decisions. How wisely you decide is the measure of your fitness.

Glimpses of Married Life

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Great excitement prevails," exclaimed Dick, waving his arms as he swung into the cozy living room, where sat Nell and Jo Parsons, with their sewing.

"Divulge!" called Nell gleefully, for it was clear that news was good.

"Read that!" Dick tossed a bulky envelope into her lap.

"Allow me?" Nell smiled into her friend's face.

"Surely, I'm consumed with curiosity," answered Jo.

Both watched Nell as she read and only the ticking of the clock was heard in the still room.

The puzzled look on her face only deepened as the minutes passed on.

"I don't understand," she exclaimed at last, laying the letter in her lap. "Tell us about it."

"Simply this," Dick drew up a chair and sat down. "The branch of mother's family living in Sweden has died out. The last member died 'without heirs of his body,' and the property reverts to the American heirs."

"Nell cast a radiant glance at Jo. 'Go on,' she commanded, for Dick had stopped."

"I stopped because I was through talking," laughed Dick. "You are not through until you tell us how large the property is, and how many there are to inherit, and why they wrote to you and—"

"One question at a time, please." Dick was fending with his hands as if to ward off an avalanche.

"Number one: I do not know the amount of the fortune. Secondly: There is a regular nest of mother's relatives who would come in for a share. As I understand it, all relatives, little and big, share alike—so two portions come here and only one to mother. Probably all have received a copy of this voluminous document. We can imagine that the numerous members of the Neuman family resemble a distributed ant hill this afternoon."

"I hope it's a big fortune," said Nell with shining eyes. "Tell us about the Swedish branch of the family."

"They have had the magnificent position of hereditary imperial boot: the day of our Gustavus Adolphus. Once after the other they have enjoyed the privilege of being kicked by the royal foot while they removed the boots from the other."

"An afraid you have inherited monarchical leanings," laughed Mrs. Parsons.

"Nell, Dick, don't work your imagination. Overcome in going to ask your mother, she'll tell me the truth about it," said Nell.

"Well, you asked me to tell you something about which I am ignorant. I had a draw on my imagination somewhat."

"When will we know about it?" Nell was laboriously reading the legal document which was all Greek to her. "I'm trying to get a scrap of information from the wealth of legal verbiage before her."

"Tradition saith not. I'll write to mother and see what she knows about it," said Dick.

"Ask them to come down. We haven't seen them for months, and it will be easy to get someone to care for the animals on the farm. I should think, and that is all there is to do in the winter."

"I'll try to get them here some way," Dick started toward the bedroom.

"Don't wake the baby," called Nell. "I just got him to sleep before you came in and he's so cross today."

"I hope you come in for a snug fortune, dear girl," said Jo when they were left alone.

"I can't believe it: it's too good to be true," Nell fluttered about the room too excited to resume her sewing.

"Mother Morion will be able to tell us what we want to know. You'll see her when she comes," she said as Jo rose to go.

to talk to him? Or would you let him make the first advances? I think a lot of the boy and think he does of me from what he has said. Kindly advise me what to do. I am seventeen years old. FRITZIE.

A good reputation should mean a lot more to a girl than any one man. If you should continue to go with this boy when you know that he is also paying attention to a questionable girl, you are endangering your reputation. Therefore let him come to you when he is ready to keep only respectable company. There are many more fine boys, Fritz, and if you lose him try not to grieve, if you aren't right now, that you took this stand.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Will you please give me your honest advice. I had hairs removed from my chin by the electric needle at a place that I thought was reliable, but in two weeks they all came back again, and thicker. Now I am discouraged. I thought the electric needle was a permanent cure. Can you kindly tell me one that is reliable? MARRIED.

The electric needle is supposed to be the only permanent cure for superfluous hair. Go back to the place where you had the hair removed, and if greater success cannot be assured, consult another specialist in that line.

TODAY'S BEAUTY HELPS

COMPLEXION BEAUTIFIER
Nothing is more repulsive than to see a woman with her face all daubed with face powder in her desire to hide marks of age. Instead of using powder, which clogs and enlarges the pores, it is far better to use a good face lotion that will improve and permanently benefit the skin. By dissolving four ounces of spumax in one-half pint hot water you can make an inexpensive lotion that will do wonders as a skin whitener and complexion beautifier. It removes all shininess, sallowness and roughness, and gives the skin a smooth, velvety tone, while it does not rub off easily like powder, nor does it show on the skin.

MAKES HAIR FLUFFY—By washing the hair with a teaspoonful of canthox dissolved in a cup of hot water, afterward rinsing thoroughly with clear water, one finds that it dries quickly and evenly. It is unstreaked, bright, soft and very fluffy, so fluffy, in fact, that it looks more abundant than it is and so soft that arranging it becomes a pleasure. This simple, inexpensive shampoo cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly of all dandruff and dirt, and leaves a clean, wholesome feeling. All scalp irritation will disappear, and the hair will be brighter and glossier than ever before.—Advertisement.

tergreen best), can, keep in cool place.

Use two tablespoons of this to half cup of cold water, and one-fourth teaspoon soda. Beat briskly.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.
Put in dishwasher before sliding down to meals. It saves half hour's time and the dishes are easier cleaned than later.

Save broken clothespins: they make excellent skewers when shaved to a point and do not mar fine wood-work when washing.

To remove any burnt substance from kettles, put in enough water to cover, add about one teaspoon good soap powder to each cup of water and set on the back of warm stove half an hour. This will not harm the kettle as if scraped with a knife, but will soak loose without any trouble.

TO CLARIFY BUTTER.
If one has the misfortune to have rancid butter, put it into a pail, cover it well with water (perhaps one-third as much water as butter), put on the stove and let boil until water is all boiled out. Then take off stove, let cool, slice a large raw potato into it, put on stove again, let cook until done, then repeat. Take off to cool and harden; the butter will be nearly as sweet and fresh as when first churned.

HELPFUL HINTS.
Fireless Dress—Muslin and cotton goods can be rendered almost fire-proof if an ounce of alum or sal ammoniac is put in the last water in which they are rinsed or in the starch when they are stiffened. Even if the clothes take fire—which is highly improbable—they will burn without flames.

Tripleless Heels—If you wear rubber heels, cut the corners off with a sharp knife and there will be no danger of your ever catching your leg in your skirt and tripping.

Baby's Bonnet Ties—Instead of putting ribbon strings on your baby's bonnet, buy a small piece of wash-silk. Cut the desired length and width, hem and gather ends at the top, sew a medium sized hook to this end. Then sew eyes onto the sides of the bonnet where you wish the ties or strings to be attached and clean ties can always be hooked onto the bonnet at a minute's notice.

"HELP WANTED" IS SEEN IN PHOTOPLAY
Popular Stage Success Proves a Revelation in Motion Pictures.
"Help Wanted," an Oliver Morosco production which was an instantaneous success on the stage, was presented on the Paramount program at the Apollo yesterday by the same producers in photoplay.

In this picture play, the public, so familiar with the stage attraction, was able to judge the vast possibilities of high grade photoplays over the speaking of road shows. In east and mounting the picture left nothing to be desired, far superior to what could be expected from a traveling show.

Lois Meredith as Gertrude and Lillian Elliott as her mother repeated the successes they made in the original New York debut. Supporting Miss Meredith in the stellar role was importer with the dyed moustache and the chronic administrations of perfume sprays presented a striking characterization.

"Help Wanted" as a picture play, was a treat to the overjoyed audiences yesterday.

"It's a long way to Tipperary," but you can reach it with a want ad.

First, three pints soft water, two pounds sugar, two ounces tartaric acid. Mix thoroughly and let boil five minutes. Let cool until nearly cold.

Now take the whites of three eggs beaten to a stiff froth, half cup flour, juice of one lemon, mix and add to the above, and flavor to taste (wintergreen best), can, keep in cool place.

Use two tablespoons of this to half cup of cold water, and one-fourth teaspoon soda. Beat briskly.

CHAPTER XXXI.

The Desert and the Sown.

Through streets in which the village quiet of the summer night was undisturbed save by the spattering tinkle of the lawn sprinklers in the front yards, and the low voices of the outdoor people taking the air and the moonlight on the porches, Griswold fared homeward, the blood pounding in his veins and the fine wine of life mounting headily to his brain.

After all the dubious stumblings he had come to the end of the road, to find awaiting him the great accusation and the great reward. By the unanswerable logic of results, in its effect upon others and upon himself, his deed had proved itself a crime. Right or wrong in the highest ethical fields, the accepted social order had proved itself strong enough to make its own laws and to prescribe the far-reaching penalties for their infraction. Under these laws he stood convicted. Never again, save through the gate of atonement, could he be reinstated as a soldier in the ranks of the conventionally righteous. True, the devotion of a loving woman, aided by a train of circumstances strikingly fortuitous and little short of miraculous, had averted the final price-paying in penal retribution. But the fact remained, He was a felon.

Into this fateful wound which might otherwise have slain him had been poured the wine and oil of a great love; a love so clean and pure in its own well-springs that it could perceive no wrong in its object; could measure no act of loyal devotion by any standard save that of its own greatness. This love asked nothing but what he chose to give. It would accept him either as he was, or as he ought to be. The place he should elect to occupy would be its place; his standards its standards.

Just here the reasoning angel opened a door and thrust him out upon the edge of a precipice and left him to look down into the abyss of the betrayers—the pit of those whose gift and curse it is to be the pace setters. In a flash of revelation it was shown him that with the great love had come a great responsibility. Where he should lead, Margery would follow, unshrinkingly, unquestioningly; never asking whether the path led up or down; asking only that his path might be hers. Instantly he was face to face with a fanged choice which threatened to tear his heart out and trample upon it; and again he recorded his decision, committing it with an oath. The price was too great; the upward path too steep; the self-denial it entailed too sacrificial.

"We have but one life to live, and we'll live it together, Margery, girl, for better or for worse," was his apostrophic declaration, made while he was turning into Shawnee street a few doors from his lodgings; and a minute later he was opening the Widow Holcomb's gate.

The house was dark and apparently deserted as to its street-fronting half when he let himself in at the gate and ran quickly up the steps. The front door was open, and he remembered afterward that he had wondered how the careful widow had come to leave it so, and why the hall lamp was not lighted. From the turn at the stairhead he felt his way to the door of his study. Like the one below, it was wide open; but someone had drawn the window shades and the interior of the room was as dark as a cavern.

Once, in the novel-writing, following the lead of many worthy predecessors, Griswold had made much of the "sixth" sense; the subtle and indefinable presence which warns its possessor of invisible danger. No such warning was vouchsafed him when he leaned across the end of the writing table, turned on the gas and held a lighted match over the chimney of the working-lamp. It was while he was still bending over the table, with both hands occupied, that he looked aside. In his own pivot chair, covering him with the mate to the weapon he had smashed and thrown away, sat the man who had opened the two doors and drawn the window shades and otherwise prepared the trap.

"You bought a couple of these little playthings, Mr. Griswold," said the man quietly. "Keep your hands right where they are, and tell in which pocket you've got the other one."

Griswold laughed, and there was a sudden snapping of invisible bonds. He dismissed instantly the thought that Charlotte Farnham had taken him at his word; and if she had not, there was nothing to fear.

"I threw the other one away a little while ago," he said. "Reach your free hand over and feel my pockets."

Broffin acted upon the suggestion promptly. "You ain't got it on you, anyway," he conceded; and when Griswold had dropped into the chair at the table's end, "I reckon you know what I'm here for."

"I know that you are holding that gun of mine at an exceedingly uncomfortable angle—for me," was the cool rejoinder. "I've always had a squeamish horror of being shot in the stomach."

The detective's grin was appreciative.

"You've got a good, cold nerve, anyway," he commented. "I've been puttin' it up that when the time came, you'd throw a fit of some sort—what? Since you're clothed in your right mind, we'll get down to business. First, I'll ask you to hand over the key to that safety-deposit box you've got in Mr. Grierson's bank."

Griswold took his bunch of keys from his pocket, slipped the one that was asked for from the ring, and gave it to his captor.

"Of course I'm surrendering it under protest," he said. "You haven't yet told me who you are, or what you are holding me up for."

Broffin waved the formalities aside with a pistol-pointed gesture. "We can skip all that. I've got you dead to rights, after so long a time, and I'm goin' to take you back to New Orleans with me. The only question is, do you go easy or hard?"

"I don't go either way until you show your authority."

"Put Them on," He Snapped.

"I don't need any authority. You're the parlor anarchist that held up the president of the Bayou State Security bank last spring and made a get-away with a hundred thousand—what?"

"All right; you say so—prove it," Griswold had taken a cigar from the open box on the writing table and was calmly lighting it. There was nothing to be nervous about. "I'm waiting," he went on, placidly, when the cigar was going. "If you are an officer, you probably have a warrant, or a requisition, or something of that sort. Show it up."

"I don't need any papers to take you," said the barked-out retort. Broffin had more than once found himself confronting similar dead walls, and he knew the worth of a bold play.

"Oh, yes, you do. You accuse me of a crime; did you see me commit the crime?"

"No."

"Well, somebody did, I suppose. Bring on your witnesses. If anybody can identify me as the man you are after, I'll go with you—without the requisition. That's fair, isn't it?"

"I know you're the man, and you know it, too, damn well!" snapped Broffin, angered into bandying words with his obstinate captive.

"That is neither here nor there; I am not affirming or denying. It is for you to prove your case, if you can. And, listen, Mr. Broffin—perhaps it will save your time and mine if I add that I happen to know that you can't prove your case."

"Why can't I?"

"Just because you can't," Griswold went on argumentatively. "I know the facts of this robbery you speak of; a great many people know them. The newspaper accounts said at the time that there were three persons who could certainly identify the robber—the president, the paying teller, and a young woman. It so happens that all three of these people are at present in Wahaska. At different times you have appealed to each of them, and in each instance you have been turned down. Isn't that true?"

Broffin glanced up, scowling. "It's true enough that you—you and the little black-eyed girl between you—have hoodooed the whole bunch!" he rasped. "But when I get you into court, you'll find that there are others."

Griswold smiled good-naturedly. "That is a bold, bad bluff, Mr. Broffin, and nobody knows it any better than you do," he countered. "You haven't a leg to stand on. This is America, and you can't arrest me without a warrant. And if you could, what would you do with me without the support of at least one of your three witnesses? Nothing—nothing at all."

Broffin laid the pistol on the table, and put the key of the safety box beside it. Then he sat in grim silence for a full minute, toying idly with a pair of handcuffs which he had taken from his pocket.

"By the eternal grapples!" he said, at length, half to himself, "I've a good mind to do it anyway—and take the chances."

As quick as a flash Griswold thrust out his hands.

"Put them on!" he snapped. "There are a hundred lawyers in New Orleans who wouldn't ask for anything better than the chance to defend me—at your expense!"

Broffin dropped the manacles into his pocket and sat back in the swing chair. "You win," he said shortly; and the battle was over.

For a little time no word was spoken. Griswold smoked on placidly, seemingly forgetful of the detective's presence. Yet he was the one who was the first to break the strained silence.

"You are a game fighter, Mr. Broffin," he said, "and I'm enough of a scrapper myself to be sorry for you. Try one of these smokes—you'll find them fairly good—and excuse me for a few minutes. I want to write a letter which, if you are going down town, perhaps you'll be good enough to mail for me."

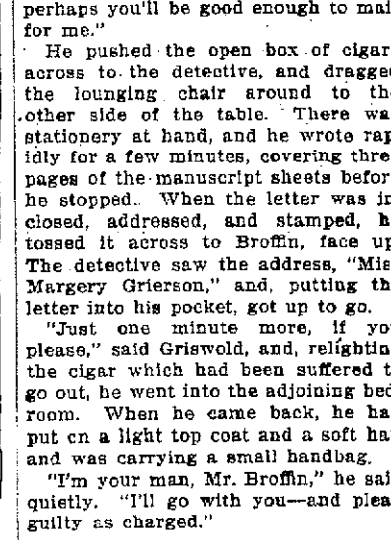

He pushed the open box of cigars across to the detective, and dragged the lounging chair around to the other side of the table. There was stationery at hand, and he wrote rapidly for a few minutes, covering three pages of the manuscript sheets before he stopped. When the letter was inclosed, addressed, and stamped, he tossed it across to Broffin, face up. The detective saw the address, "Miss Margery Grierson," and, putting the letter into his pocket, got up to go.

"Just one minute more, if you please," said Griswold, and, relighting the cigar which had been suffered to go out, he went into the adjoining bedroom. When he came back, he had put on a light top coat and a soft hat, and was carrying a small bag.

"I'm your man, Mr. Broffin," he said quietly. "I'll go with you—and plead guilty as charged."

Wahaska, the village-conscious, had its nine-days' wonder displayed for it in inch-type headlines when the Daily Wahaskan, rehearsing the story of the New Orleans bank robbery, told of the voluntary surrender of the robber, and of his deportation to the southern city to stand trial for his offense.

Dinner Stories

"I always put ten dollars of my salary in the savings bank every Saturday," said the young man who was holding down his first real job. "That's a very good idea, my son," said his father approvingly. "You bet it's a good idea, dad. Believe me, that ten comes in mighty handy along about Thursday or Friday."

Of late meetings between Gladys and Genevieve have been few and far between.

Gladys' friend could not fathom the reason why, and in order to "satisfy her curiosity she called one afternoon."

"No, mum, Miss Gladys is not in," the maid informed her. "She has gone to the class."

"Why, what class?" inquired the caller, in surprise.

"Well, mum, you know Miss Gladys is getting married soon. So she's taking lessons in domestic science."

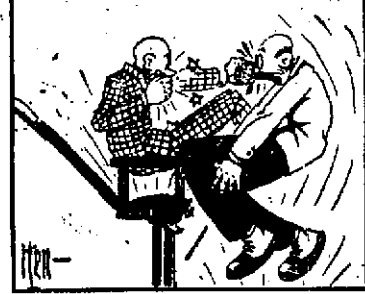

Sir George Faish, the English economist, said in New York: "There are worldwide prospects of good times. They who bawled bad times have no rhyme or reason to do so, except that they've got an ax to grind."

"They remind me of the ragged urchin crying in the slum. 'What are you crying for?' the rich lady visitor asked. 'Dunno,' he replied. 'Wotcher got?'"

"Traded your motorboat for an aeroplane, eh? What's the idea?" the well-to-do this about an aeroplane—even if the engine does break down you're bound to land somewhere."

WATER FOR THE GRINDSTONE

Narrow Detachable-Link Chain Is Arranged to Run Over Circumference, Furnishing Moisture.

Grindstones are frequently made so as to have the lower edge run in water in order to obviate the necessity of pouring water on the face. When the stone is not in use, the lower part is always in the water, usually at the same portion of the circumference, which soon softens and wears out of true.

When the grindstone is set up, bolt a disk of wood against the stone. The wood should be of sufficient thickness to allow a narrow detachable-link chain to run over its circumference.

Chain Throws Water on Stone.

says a writer in the Popular Mechanic. Fasten a flange of tin or sheet iron against the board to keep the chain running in place and attach a water trough under the stone, so the water level will not touch its surface. The chain runs in the water at all times, and carries the water to the surface of the stone.

TOOL FOR PULLING SPIKES

Lever Has Head With Graduated Series of Jaws on It—One Good Pull Is All That Is Needed.

For pulling spikes or large nails from packing boxes and the like, the implement invented by a Pennsylvania man and shown in the illustration is said to be very effective. A lever has one end tapered into a lifter, with a thin edge which can be inserted under the head of the nail to pry it up far enough to get a grip with the head of the implement. This head resembles that of a claw-hammer, except that it is much heavier and the jaws have a graduated series of serrations adapted to engage nails of different sizes. Once the spike is pried up a little way and caught in the head of the puller, the rest is easy. The leverage of the tool is so powerful that no matter how long or how firmly imbedded a spike may be, one good pull on the handle will uproot it without the slightest difficulty.

Twin Tires?—No

One's a Goodyear as It Might Be
The Other Costs Us $1,635,000 More

This is to prove that you can't judge tires by looks.

Here are two Goodyear tires, seemingly identical. But one is built like many of its rivals. Goodyear extras are omitted. The other has those hidden values. And those unseen extras, on this year's output, will cost us $1,635,000.

This year's betterments alone add to our cost $500,000 yearly. Yet our 1915 price reduction saves our users about five million dollars.

No Price Excuse

This is not a price excuse. Goodyear prices have been fairly racing down. Our late big reduction made the third in two years, totaling 45 per cent. No equal tire can compete with the Goodyear, because of our matchless output. None does. Goodyear excels all other tires in at least five important ways.

You Deserve It

You deserve the Goodyear quality when you buy a tire. You deserve Fortified Tires, with the No-Rim-Cut feature, the "On-Air" cure, our extra-strong fabric, our number of plies. You deserve in anti-skids our All-Weather tread, tough, double-thick and resistless.

These things have brought Goodyear the largest sale in the world. They are saving our users millions of dollars yearly.

They are at your command. Any dealer, if you ask him, will supply you Goodyear tires. (2491)

TWO ST. PAUL BOYS ON LONG BIKE TRIP

Visit Aunt Here and Leave This Morning On Journey Overland to New York City.

Leon Schroeder, 18, and Harwood Temple, 17, two St. Paul boys, left Janesville this morning on bicycles bound for New York. Schroeder and Temple are nephews of Mrs. Mary Walker, St. Mary's avenue, and have been her guest since Monday, when they arrived in the city.

Although the boys expect to reach the metropolis within a month from June 28, the date of their start, they have been spending quite a good while visiting various places of interest in Wisconsin. Their trip is wholly one of sight-seeing and pleasure. Through the sale of post cards, they are financing their expedition.

Each carries equipment weighing approximately twenty-five pounds on his person and bicycle. They camp out nightly by the roadside, carrying their tent with them, together with their cooking utensils. Clothing, toilet articles, tools, etc., are contained in a knapsack on their backs.

The boys are armed with a letter of recommendation from Winn Powers, mayor of St. Paul, and after leaving Janesville will collect the signatures of mayors, city officials and notables they encounter on their trip.

They found riding in northern Wisconsin rather rough, but after leaving Chicago and the state of Illinois they went to experience better roads. They will spend up in Ohio and keep going at a fast pace until New York City is reached.

PORTER

ANNUAL MEETING OF LIBRARY BOARD

Report Shows Big Increase in Circulation and New Borrowers.—Election of Officers.

At the meeting of the public library board, held last Friday, the report of Miss Egan, the librarian, showed that the circulation had increased during the past year over three thousand and there were nearly a thousand new borrowers, or readers issued. Of this number of books circulated among the people a third were non-fiction. The latter fact pleased the board a great deal, for in that way they have shown the public how the institution is not only for pleasure and pastime, but educational and instructive.

Judge Fife was elected president and Mrs. A. P. Lovejoy was elected vice president for the ensuing year on the board.

Work has been commenced on the redecorating of the second floor of the library building.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul has ordered 884 tons of steel from the Federal Bridge company for 105-ft. spans.

Nearly 3,000 employees in the shops of the Milwaukee road are affected by a retrenchment order reducing the working week from five to four days. The order went into effect Tuesday morning. According to A. E. Mander, superintendent of motive power, the change is indefinite. No orders have been received to reduce the working force. A report that a 6 per cent reduction in wages had been ordered for the store department was denied by G. G. Allen, general storekeeper. The working day for about 150 men in this department has been reduced from ten to nine hours, he said. P. C. Eldredge, general superintendent, said that no retrenchment had been decided for his department. The local shops are feeling the results of the retrenchment order. The following is the order received here: "Commencing July 6th the men making force shall be reduced to eight hours per day. From now on, five days' work per week. Formerly the men worked nine hours a day and six days out of the week. Each man was expected to visit in Indiana, Nebraska and Iowa, making all the places in their work."

WISCONSIN PICNIC ON PACIFIC COAST

Janesville Residents Are Guests of Honor at Gathering in Park at Long Beach, California.

A party of Janesville people was entertained last week at a Wisconsin picnic at Long Beach, Cal., last week, at which there were a number of former Janesville residents. The following is taken from a Long Beach paper: "One day last week a gathering of happy, care-free people was seen beneath the eucalyptus trees of Bixby park, which overlooks the Pacific ocean. These were old friends from Wisconsin gathered to meet James Cutter and daughter, Mrs. Elma Dykeman, and Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Brewer of Janesville, Wis. The hosts and hostesses were Mrs. Joseph Coleman, Mr. and Mrs. F. Yates, and Mr. and Mrs. Joel Proctor.

MRS. C. A. HUNT, ARTIST, PASSES AWAY AT HOME

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Monroe, Wis., July 3.—Mrs. C. A. Hunt, an artist of rare ability, passed away at her home in this city after a lingering illness covering a period of three years. She suffered four strokes of paralysis, the last one proving fatal.

Mrs. Hunt was widely known through her work, it having drawn wide attention. She was born in Allegheny, Pa., in 1852, and when five years of age moved to Warren, Ill., with her parents.

She was married in 1878 to Dr. C. H. Hunt and resided in Stanwood, Ia., where he practiced medicine. Dr. Hunt moved away in Stanwood in 1893 and five years later Mrs. Hunt returned to Warren, from where she moved to this city three years ago.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. W. T. Saucerman and Miss Irene Saucerman, one brother, E. C. Saucerman, and one grandchild, Willard Saucerman, Jr., all of this city.

SHE DON'T HAVE TO WEAR HER TEETH IN HER POCKET ANY MORE.

Mrs. H. of Whitewater, lost all her teeth from pyorrhea and her mouth continued so sore that she could only eat the softest food. She had four sets of teeth which she wore in her pocket most of the time. She had been under treatment for four years, by dentists and doctors, all failures. A lady in Janesville and Mr. Pollock, relatives, recommended her to try Dr. P. Burrus, which did. In fourteen days her mouth was well and she has a fine set of teeth that she uses with the greatest comfort and her health is rapidly improving. He had three other difficult cases from Whitewater and was successful with all of them. Dr. A. P. Burrus, Corner Court and River Sts., Janesville, Wis.

Results of European War and Recent Manoeuvres Tend to Convince Experts That Submarine is Most Valuable Agent.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, July 8.—The Naval program to be presented to Congress, in the light of the lessons of the European War, has not been definitely framed, notwithstanding the fact that Secretary of the Navy Daniels and his advisors have had the subject under consideration continuously for months.

The building plans for the coming year will not be completed until the last moment, when, probably, President Wilson will say the final word as to the number and type of ships the Navy department will request. Meanwhile Secretary Daniels hopes for more information from the war zone upon which the United States can build with profit and safety.

So far little information has been received to add the naval constructors. All the belligerents are maintaining the strictest secrecy as to their plans for the lessons they have drawn for themselves from the few sea battles. American naval attaches at London, Paris and Berlin, have had little opportunity to furnish enlightening reports and there have been no foreign observers aboard any of the war fleets at sea.

It is said that the American attaché at Berlin has had opportunity to see considerable parts of the work going on in German yards, but if so he has been under the strictest injunctions not to reveal what he has observed, except through reports, during the continuance of the war.

Future of Dreadnaught.
The greatest question that has come out of the war is considered by many American naval officers to be the future of the dreadnaught. So far as is known not a single capital ship has been engaged and the value of those enormously expensive fighting machines is still in question.

As it was when England launched the first all-big-gun ship, the Dreadnaught, England's newest super-dreadnaught, the Queen Elizabeth, has been bombarded by the Dardanelles; but so far as Navy department advice goes, she is the only ship of her class to have fired a shot so far.

The reason for that, navy officers say, is the full realization of predictions made for submarines when the first undersea boat was constructed. Against those small but comparatively inexpensive weapons, no adequate means of defense has been found and the first line ships of the fighting navy are being mined, field or screened or torpedoes and destroyers leaving the active work of the war to the older pre-dreadnaught battleships, the battle cruisers and lighter and less expensive craft.

Submarine's Future.
When the first submarines of the American navy in which submarines participated took place, some officers declared the day of the battleship was passed. In the light of the war, which approached shore and destroyed the Dardanelles; but so far as Navy department advice goes, she is the only ship of her class to have fired a shot so far.

Navy engineers now are deeply engaged with experiments looking to the discovery of some practical defense against submarine attack. Should they find a solution of the problem, the big ship program will be vindicated. While nothing has been revealed of their experiments, it is assumed that questions of greater subdivision of hulls and stronger bulkheads, or armor to extend about the midship sections of battleships below the waterline and capable of resisting the blow of a modern torpedo, and also the location of submarines at a considerable distance and their pursuit by swift, light, easily handled craft such as destroyers are being considered. The latter defense is the one only practical one which seems to have met with any success abroad, so far as is known, yet officers here point out that at best, it is like searching for a needle in a haystack and that the destroyer defense does not meet the problem in anything like an adequate way.

Have No Defense.
Location and destruction of submarines by aeroplanes also is considered impractical in any but special cases where weather, depth of water and other conditions make it possible. Bomb dropping from aeroplanes, even over the sea, is a difficult task and other easily visible stationary objects has not proven so successful as to give much promise where a small, dimly visible shape beneath the surface of the water is the target.

Similarly, submarine against submarine is not considered a possible development of undersea warfare unless some new and startling device to give submarine commanders the power of underwater vision is discovered. A submarine is a blind creature, once it is below the surface. One of the exploits of the war, however, was the sinking of an Italian submarine by an Australian underwater boat. The reports of the encounter, however, were not sufficiently complete to indicate the value of that sort of warfare.

The result of the development of the submarine with widening range of action, mounting disappearing guns for surface action, and with increasing numbers of torpedo tubes as shown by reports from Europe has been to create a school of navy officers here who are said to be urging the abandonment of dreadnaught building in favor of a huge submarine fleet. Other officers declare the backbone of a navy must always be in first line battleships and are urging larger and more heavily armed dreadnaughts than ever. Some place—between these two schools of theory, it is said, the course of the department will lie in its recommendations to Congress.

Defense Issue.
Officers who advocate the submarine navy say that it is thoroughly practicable for the United States because the mission of the American navy is to defend the United States from invasion, not to prepare the way for an American invasion of any enemy country. That, they declare, has always been in the theory of the navy department and accounts for the fact that great efforts have been made to obtain appropriations for swift battle-cruisers such as those employed by the British and German navies. Lacking a merchant marine to be protected and being a self-contained nation, fully able to support itself with the resources within its own borders, they argue that battle cruisers have not been considered a necessity to the United States navy and the attention has been concentrated upon getting the greatest possible number of heavy battleships, floating fortresses to defend the coasts. That theory also accounts for the lower speed of American super-dreadnaughts it is said, and the greater concentration of gun powder in ships of American design compared to similar ships abroad.

With fleets of submarines stationed along both coasts and with navy yards equipped to care for them, those officers argue that even the battleships could be spared from the defense line and that no enemy would dare approach with ships and transports a coast well mined and defended with land guns as well as submarines. The risks would be too great, the chances of overwhelming disaster too many.

Need Auxiliary Ships.
It is certain that Congress will be asked to provide liberally in auxiliary ships for the present navy, particularly as to parent ships for submarines. Navy officers are obtaining all possible data on German and British submarine tenders and may propose the construction of several of those vessels so designed as to be able to raise sunken submarines or even to take aboard and transport the considerable distances several of the little fighting ships. Reports have reached the United States of several such ships in the European navy.

It is also probable that a number of swift scout cruisers will be recommended and that a consistent cruiser program will be proposed designed to give the navy an ample fleet of second class cruisers in a few years. As yet, however, there is nothing to indicate the recommendation of battle cruisers at this time. The department is, it is intimated, probable will content itself with laying before Congress a full presentation of the arguments for and against that type.

CHICAGO UNIVERSITY BARN STORMERS TO PLAY FAIRIES

The University of Chicago baseball team, which is to make a tour of the Orient this fall, will be in Beloit July 10. This spring's team has been strengthened by the addition of several of the better players among the alumni.

Some of the better known men with the team are "Sluggo" Desjardien, the Chicago football and baseball star, who is pitching, and "Pat" Page, this year's coach, who is also pitching. Right Kai Chang, a Chinese student, is also with the team, playing in the outfield, and occasionally pitching. A great deal of interest also centers around "Dolly" Gray, the conference leader, who hit 320 in the conference games this spring, and who was named the most popular student at the "U."

The Fairbanks Morse Beloit team, whom they are to play Saturday, have been strengthened by the addition of two Three I League players. Benny Jewell, the Rockford second baseman, made his debut with the Fairies Monday, by scoring the first run in the game with the Gunthers. Jewell is a ball player of years of professional experience. Wheeling, W. Va. Central League pitcher, who was sold by the club to the St. Louis Cardinals, he had quite a taste of the "big show."

While he has been playing second with the Rockford club, his natural position is shortstop, which he has always played until this year, and the Fairies have shifted him back to this position.

Best pitcher Miller, Rockford Three I pitcher, is now with the Fairies. He is a big fellow, with worlds of speed. He also has had considerable experience in the better class of professional ball. He was for three years the main stay of the pitching staff of the Sioux City Western League club, last year with Terre Haute in record this season with Rockford. He will probably work Saturday against the Maroons.

A NEW REASON FOR MATTY'S POOR FORM

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

New York, July 8.—Theories galore have been offered since the baseball season started about the cause of Matty's defection, but it remains for Howard Trumbo, a contracting engineer of Havana, Cuba, to come out with a new one. Trumbo is in New York on a vacation.

According to Trumbo, the famous Giant pitcher is suffering from "Golf Throatism."

"It's a fact," says Trumbo. "Nearly every golfer in Cuba has suffered from the peculiar ailment this year, and I haven't a doubt but that the stuff got into Matty's shoulder when he was playing on our links last winter. It affects us just like reports say Matty is affected. Several of us have fallen off badly in our golf game because of this muscular stiffness."

Milton News

Milton, July 8.—F. H. Story was awarded the prize for the best float, Hall and Johnson for the best decorated automobile, Miss Vera Coon for best decorated team and carriage and Griffith's donkey outfit won the comic prize in the Fourth parade, held Monday.

There were three hundred automobiles in town at the Fourth of July celebration.

Prof. A. E. Whitford and Mrs. C. E. Crandall attended the funeral of their aunt, Mrs. Curtis, at Madison, on Tuesday.

Miss Nettie Coon left Tuesday for California, where she will visit relatives and attend the Panama Exposition.

Mrs. W. S. Van Nostrand and son of Merrill are visiting at W. W. Clarke's.

The arch erected for the Fourth will not be taken down until September, but is to be illuminated on band concert evenings.

At the annual school meeting F. J. Lee was elected as director, and the usual appropriations made.

Rev. Dr. Randolph was in Chicago Wednesday.

W. L. Crandall leaves for California next week, where he will spend three months visiting his children and attending the exposition.
